

Why Take Music Lessons?

Improves Performance In School

Music Instruction has been linked to the enhancement of children's abstract reasoning skills that are necessary for learning math and science.

Research has shown that after taking music lessons for six months, children performed 34% higher on tests measuring spatial-temporal ability than children who do not take music lessons.

Provides Important Experiences

Musical activities provide children with important experiences that can develop physical coordination, timing, memory, visual, aural, and language skills. When they work to increase their command of music, they gain important experience with self-paced learning, mental concentration, and a heightened personal awareness.

Prepares Children for the Future

Music skills, such as communication, self-esteem, creative thinking, imagination, and invention, are essential for success in the future.

Why Music?

Music is worth knowing.

Music is one of the most important manifestations of our cultural heritage. Children need to know about Beethoven and Louis Armstrong as well as about Newton and Einstein.

Music is a potential in every individual that, like all potential, should be developed to its fullest.

Music provides an outlet for creativity, self-expression, and individual uniqueness. It enables us to express our noblest thoughts and feelings.

Music teaches students about unique aspects of their relationships with other human beings and with the world around them, in their own and other cultures.

Music opens avenues of success for students who may have problems in other areas of the curriculum and opens approaches to learning that can be applied in other contexts.

Studying music increases the satisfaction students derive from music by sharpening sensitivity, raising their level of appreciation, and expanding their musical horizons.

Music is one of the most powerful and profound symbol systems that exists.

Music helps students learn a significant lesson--that not all aspects of life are quantifiable.

Music exalts the human spirit.
